Huns Again Slaughtering Women and Children in England

The Germans again started their murderous air raids over England on Monday last, killing 14 men, 17 women and 16 children; injured 93 men, 59 women and 17 children; all but seven of the foregoing casualties occurring in London. The material damage was not serious.

Another attack was again made on Tuesday and they again attempted to enter London, but according to late reports on Tuesday night they had failed to do so, although the raid was still in progress.

In Monday's raid 70 British air-men went up after the Huns and all returned safely.

Presentation Made to Popular Pastor

The congregation of Knox Presbyterian church gathered in the church building on Monday night for the purpose of making a presentation and saying farewell to Mrs. and Rev. D. H. Marshall, their retiring pastor.

Considering the extremely cold weather with a bitter wind blowing there was a good crowd out, the church being filled with the friends of the pastor and his wife.

The main feature of the occasion was the presentation of purses to the guests of the evening. The chairman, H. E. Osmond, after proceedings had been opened, called upon Mrs. Marshall to come to the platform where Mrs. Osmond made a neat address on behalf of the ladies of the congregation, the Ladies Aid and Women's Missionary Society, complimentary to Mrs. Marshall on her activity in church work during her residence amongst them and wishing her every success in her new home. Mrs. G. Watson then presented her with a purse of silver contributed by the ladies. Mrs. Marshall was completely taken by surprise, but managed to express her appreciation in a few well chosen words.

Rev. D. H. Marshall, with Mr. G. B. Sexsmith and Mr. H. W. Chambers, was then called to the front and Mr. Sexsmith made the address in which, with his usual humour and happy manner, he complimented Mr. Marshall on his work during the nine years he had been with the church and expressed the regret of the congregation at his departure, but wished him every success in his new field of work and asked him to accept the purse of gold as a token of their esteem and good will.

Rev. Mr. Marshall replied with a few well chosen remarks in which he referred to the splendid harmony which had always prevailed between him and the congregation and stated that both Mrs. Marshall and himself would look back with pleasure on their residence amongst them, and hoped that the work of the church would be kept up until his successor was appointed. He sincerely thanked them for their kind remembrance and good wishes.

The chairman then called upon Messrs. H. W. Chambers, F. Moyle, Parker R. Reed and Dr. Clarke for speeches and all responded in a manner very suitable to the occasion.

During the evening a programme of instrumentals, songs and recitations were rendered by the following which helped materially to enliven the proceedings: violin selections by Mr. A and W. Gertz; duet by Miss Ruby and Dr. McL. Duncan; recitation by Mrs. J. Huget; solo by Dr. Duncan; song by male quartette. Mr. W. Farrington and Miss M. Gertz accompanying the different numbers very acceptably on the organ.

The ladies had prepared a fine lunch of hot coffee and other good things, which it can be believed was much appreciated by those present, who fortified the inner man before again venturing out into the cold.

The proceedings were brought to a close with the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and "God Save the King," and everybody before departing shaking hands and bidding farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall.

The Women's Institute Social a Success

The concert and box social held by the Women's Institute on Friday night last was a success in spite of the very cold weather, a fairly large attendance being present in the Opera House to hear the performance.

Proceedings were opened with the singing of "The Maple Leaf," after which Mrs. W. H. Chambers gave a good address on the aims and objects of the Women's Institute, which was well received.

A fine programme of songs, dances, recitations and instrumentals, most of which received hearty encores, were rendered by Mrs. J. Huget, Mrs. W. Keely, Miss D. Acton, Miss M. Chambers, the Misses Lucille and Laura Smith, Laura, Evelyn and Orfa Liesemer, A. Schmeltie, Reta Weigand, Shantz, Wilson and Ross, and Master Aylmer Liesemer.

After the programme the box social was held and every person enjoyed themselves as they saw fit. Mr. G. B. Sexsmith auctioned the boxes which in the majority did not fetch high prices although there were some very handsome creations made to attract the male eye. The proceeds of the sale were $90.70, from which is to be deducted the sum of $12.15 for expenses, leaving a balance of $88.55 to be divided between the Red Cross and Ogden Convalescent Home.

A very successful evening was closed with the singing of God Save The King.

The Squire's Sweetheart

— BY —
KATHARINE TYNANWARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne, and Toronto

"Hilary!" she said. "I don't know where you have sprung from; but Heaven must have sent you. She has had a very bad attack. The worst yet. I was praying I might find someone to take a telegram message for me to Sarney's shop in the village where there is a café office. I want Mr. Langton to come at once. 4713, Mayfair. Oh, Hilary dear, how glad I am to see you!"

Her joy was rather for the opportunity of the messenger than for him personally, yet his heart leaped and sang though he tried to keep it grave and sorrowful as befitted the message he was carrying as he ran on his way up hill and down dale to the village he had passed through a couple of miles back.

It took some little time to get on to Mr. Langton, but finally he succeeded. Mr. Langton would come at once.

He raced back again at headlong speed. The way was too long for him, but he could not shorten it except by putting on a sprint; and it was really an incredibly short space of time till he stood at the cottage door, panting, while he gave Margaret Mr. Langton's message.

"She is a little better," the girl said in a whisper. "I have never seen her so exhausted before. I was afraid she was going to slip through my fingers; but now she is sleeping easily."

Her bosom heaved and he saw the lift of it through the muslin of her dress; her voice was suddenly lost in tears. She was not looking herself. The long anxiety had told on her fresh and joyous beauty.

"Poor Hilary!" she said, with trembling voice. "You have been killing yourself running my message. I am going to get you some tea. Afterwards you will tell me how you came to be here."

He sat down on the green seat under the apple tree to get cool. Margaret came and went, talking to him in low tones. Her mother still slept. Presently, when she awoke, Hilary might see her. He was not to be too frightened, or to let her see that he thought she looked ill.

She spread a cloth on the little green table and brought out the cups and saucers, a loaf and a pat of butter, honey in a glass dish, and other things. Hilary noticed that her hands looked work-worn. Somehow he loved them better than when they had been white and delicate. He could hardly keep himself, in full view of the road, from taking them into his own and kissing them.

The girl had assumed some new majesty to him. He approached her with a feeling of adoration. Was this—could this be the Margaret with whom he had taken part in many childish pranks? It was she who led the way into all the scrapes, he who followed. Once she had refused to put gentles on a hook when they went fishing and he had been contemptuous of her. She had had a few feminine timidities. Cattle alarmed her unless she was sure of them. He had once forced her by his taunts to cross a field where there was a bull and the beast had chased her. What a merciless young savage he had been!

The scared look was passing away from her eyes while she talked in a low voice, sweet as the running laughter of the birds about them. She could not get over the marvel of Hilary's having discovered them by such mere chance at a moment when she needed help so badly. "It was a very bad fright," she said plaintively.

"You ought not to have to hear it alone," Hilary said.

She colored slightly. "I have become an expert nurse," she answered. "No one else would care so much."

"There is only one other person," said Hilary. "Have you noticed how tired and old-looking Mr. Langton has become?"

"I have not noticed anything," said Margaret. "I have been thinking too much of her. Is it not a sweet spot?"

But we shall have to leave it as the summer advances. Even as it is, though we are only half-way down the ravine, we do not get enough air. I will not go back to Marigolds where she was so unhappy, where they were so hateful about her."

"The Squire thinks you should come back. So does Mr. Fritchard. So does everybody. You will like Mrs. Meyrick?"

Margaret's eyes rested on him quietly.

"I shall have to go some time," she said.

"With me," said Hilary; and the impetuous color flamed in his face.

"You are not going to elude me again."

WATERY BLISTERS FORMED ERUPTIONS

On Hands. Caused Disfigurement, Itching and Burning. Cuticura Healed.

"The trouble which I had affected my hands only. It first came in watery blisters under the skin, and if they were scratched they broke, causing a mass of sore eruptions that caused disfigurement, itching, burning and loss of sleep. The trouble lasted about one year and after using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for about three months I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Aileen Sweet, Main St., Eastman, Que.

An Interesting Letter
From a Well Known
Westerdale Man
At the Front

France, Sept. 26th, 1917.

Dear Friends of Westerdale Sunday School:

I wish to say at the outset that I am sorry for having kept you waiting so long for a letter from me, but one becomes rather neglectful of his correspondence here. Indeed, at times, one has all he can do to find time to write home, one of the first duties of a soldier. After spending six months in this country in different parts I find there is so much I might write about that it is difficult to decide what might prove most interesting to you. Of course there is no use of my writing anything about the war, since you have heard of nothing else, and like myself, do not care to talk about it. There are a few things which impressed themselves on my mind as interesting, and I will do my best to give you an idea of them. The country in general resembles that around Westerdale, excepting perhaps that there are more hills here. The French believe in cultivating every available inch of ground, and as a result as far as one can see there are no fences of any kind, except just around a farm building, where stone or brick is employed. The people, even agriculture laborers, do not live in separate places, but congregate in small villages and go out to work on the land. Every man has his own holding and cultivates it to his own desire. The result is that you will see an acre of potatoes, next an acre of wheat, next one of oats and so on. There are no large fields of grain where one could wade in with an eight foot binder. The houses are all brick and stone, perhaps on account of high prices of lumber, but I think because the people build their houses to last. A farm house, stables, etc. are in a square; next the house a space is paved, and in the centre of the square, perhaps fifteen feet from the door, is the manure heap from the stables, and in the majority of cases the well from which the water supply is taken is just on the edge of the heap; needless to say we are not using those wells. All the rain from the roofs runs into the centre which is generally lower than at the outside. Of course these are the dwellings of the laboring class of the tenant farmers. The richer class have fine houses set in lovely grounds, and it is a pleasure to look at some of the homes here. The towns are much the same as in England, but are not so clean looking. The streets and country roads are all cobblestones and are very bad to walk on. I think the English are teaching them something about road making for they have miles of perfect roads leading to the lines. The organization in the army is wonderful and a wounded chap gets the best of care, for only a few hours after being hit he is in a comfortable bed miles from the line, where attentive nurses and skilled doctors do all possible to make him comfortable and cure him of his injuries. I have had some hospital experience myself in France and cannot speak too highly of the care and attention shown to the injured soldiers. Our life in the army changes every day, here today and there tomorrow. We are constantly on the move, seeing new places and making our homes, maybe for the night only, under all sorts of conditions. In fine weather the outdoor life is great, but in the cold and wet one is glad to have a roof over him. Bilets vary, depending where we are, from a room in a house when on rest to a German dugout forty feet below the ground. Some of the latter are excellent, being built of cement, large and roomy, with fairly comfortable bunks. At present I and a friend have a nice little home built of sand bags and plank, about ten by six feet, and have it fairly well fitted up with shelves, hooks, and a bed made of twigs which we have to keep renewing as the leaves come off and the hard switches are felt through the rubber sheets. You no doubt hear a good deal of talk about the liquor in England and here. Now you can take it from me, the chaps who write back and talk so much about it have not formed their opinions correctly. I have seen as much in England as the next chap and have not seen any ruined or degraded in the Canadian army yet. The beer sold in canteens is such that a chap would have to stay for about two days to become intoxicated, and the average soldier has not enough money to buy enough liquor to become a moral wreck such as some chaps spread about. There is less drunkenness in the Canadian army than in any on record, and it is a reflection on the characters of the brave fellows to even insinuate that they drink to excess. The Canadian soldier makes use of the power of self control more than a great many give him credit for. Such reports spread by people who know nothing whatever about it are not taken kindly by the boys here. So rest assured there is nothing in such startling, vivid descriptions of the effect of liquor on the Canadian soldier. There is one thing which I have noticed in the army, and you will no doubt be pleased to hear of it, and that is the attitude of the average soldier towards religion and religious things; whether it is the constant danger one is in or the thoughts of one's loved ones far away I do not know, but nevertheless a man's thoughts turn more to the teaching of the Bible than ever they did before. Of course, service is compulsory in the army, but at the services at the Y. M. C. A. and other places on Sunday evening, and on week nights, one will always find the building or tent full to the doors. At communion services before going into the line and out of it one always finds a large attendance. The chief effect of the army life on the young man is to steady him and give him better control over himself and to influence him to live a better life afterwards. It is not assisting any to degrade a man, make a drunkard out of him and ruin him physically and spiritually. You will find that the man who comes back will be a clean living, straight, and a nobler character than when he came out here. So now dear friends I must close this letter and in closing cannot find anything more appropriate to say than the opening lines of that grand old hymn, one of the last we heard before leaving our country, "God be with you till we meet again." With best regards and sincere wishes for your prosperity, I remain, yours sincerely, Pte. H. BRADWELL.

Survey Forest Resources

Ontario Commission Has But Meagre Details at Hand

The commission of conservation hopes soon to undertake a survey of the forest resources of Ontario similar to the investigations it has already made in British Columbia and Saskatchewan. Only the most fragmentary data respecting the forests of Ontario are now available, although there is a vast amount of detailed information in the possession of timber owners, government officers and railways which could probably be secured. The commission is handicapped in undertaking such an investigation by the scarcity of competent foresters.

At present Ontario has the largest fire protection organization on the continent. Last year at the height of the fire season, its staff consisted of about 1,000 men.

A Solar Plexus Blow

Money advanced by the United States to the now non-existent provisional Russian government, is for the most part still here in the form of supplies prepared or preparing for shipment, and it will remain here for a while. This is the word from Washington and it is relieving. ## Rose From the Ranks

General Verkhovsky, who was the last of the distinguished soldiers who served as ministers of war in Russia, was popular with the army owing in all probability to the fact that he had served in the ranks. In his early years, as the result of some conflict with authority, he left the military college and entered the army as a private, in which capacity he went through the Manchurian campaign. He was a simple colonel on the outbreak of the present war, and when Rumania joined the allies saw most of the fighting following upon Falkenhayn's "break through."

Coal Mine Investigation

Mine Disasters Believed to Be Due to Geological Bumps

George S. Rice, the well-known eastern mining expert, called in by the provincial government to investigate the "bumps" in the Crow's Nest coal mining field, held responsible for disasters, including one last spring when more than a score of lives were lost, has made his report. The most important of his findings is that he recommends a permanent commission be formed to investigate and review the evidence collected by members of the commission, the inspectors of mines and others, having on its membership a geologist, a mining engineer, a chemist and an experienced mining operator.

Mr. Rice says the "bumps" are believed to have been caused by subsidence of the roof in certain areas under rigid rocks, leaving a great unsupported span of rock stratum. When one of these gives way it means the hammer-like blows of thousands of tons of rock striking on the immediate roof of flexible stratum overlaying the mine, which imparts the blow downward, breaking the timber, causing extensive falls in the mine, and sending rock tremors through the strata.

Germany's Nemesis

German Militarism Already Defeated by the Economic Forces Ranged Against It

The German rush into Northern Italy is a showy political success. It will inflate pride and inspire the lusty singing of "Deutschland über Alles," but it will not fill German stomachs, nor will it furnish German factories with the raw material for which they are starving. German militarism is not merely discredited, it is already defeated, by the economic forces ranged against it. Germany has brought military victory with financial ruin. The Kaiser has ridden in triumph through Brussels, Belgrade, Warsaw and Bukharest. What does that avail him while an unbreakable wall of steel bars his way to the heart of France, and while Great Britain and the United States hold the ocean roads? With every month of war Germany's ruin must become more assured. Militarism is already out at elbows. When peace is signed it will be in the bankruptcy court. After that, democracy may be trusted to prevent its recrudescence.—London Daily Express.

Home Canned Vegetables

Reports that there is danger of poisoning from vegetables preserved by the cold pack method have been placed in the category of enemy propaganda by Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the U.S. national emergency food garden commission. "Home canned goods are safe and necessary."

A Man of Action

The Supreme Man for the Supreme Job

Two years ago the declared will of our elected representatives was clearly a will toward peace. Certain of us had a will toward war. Among the persons suspected of this will was Theodore Roosevelt. I followed him. I do not follow him in all his moods but I find that I am always following him in the mass of his acts. I shall go down to my grave believing that he was the greatest of all the men of my times, for action. He could sit in at an inter-allied conference and produce a united political and military front, beyond any other man that lives, and I wish he were doing it. He could knock the heads of Britons and Americans and Frenchmen and Italians together, as he knocked the heads of capitalists and proletarians together in the anti-trust coal fields, faster than anybody else. He is the supreme man for that supreme job. Send him, Mr. Wilson, send him.—William Hard in the New Republic.

An Appreciation

Vice-chairman of American Railway Advisory Commission Pays Compliment to C.P.R.

For the last two years the Canadian Pacific Railway, in connection with the Pacific steamers of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, has carried a very large proportion of the passengers from the United States to Russia, and as these passengers have included a great many American railroad men, who have been surprised at the excellence of the service, a remarkable volume of trade is developing, greatly to the benefit of Canada itself. Among these passengers was the American railway advisory commission, consisting of the leading railway experts of the United States, who travelled from Chicago to Vancouver, and thence to Yokohama via the Empress of Asia. Mr. Henry Miller, vice-chairman of this highly important commission, has written Vice-President G. M. Bosworth a letter of deep appreciation, in which, after referring to many individual courtesies along the route, he remarks: "You have good reason to be proud of your organization and service, and we take this method of thanking you heartily for your kindness and courtesy."

German Attacks

Behind the Lines

The Lesson Written in the Italian Drive

But even if a supreme disaster has been escaped in Italy it is essential that no allied statesman and no allied patriot should mistake the lesson there written. By every influence that she can exert Germany is attacking behind the lines and in the ranks of her enemies. The Anarchists, the Socialists, the Clericals, the intellectual and the ignorant, the visionary thinker and the man without thought—all are seized upon by her. The Utopian ideals of some, the selfish cowardice of others—these are the lines through which Germany operates for the destruction of her enemies and the dissolution of the national unity of the countries who are fighting her.

Allied armies have now come to the support of Italy. We may hope that Venice is safe and the crest of the invasion is passed, but unless we recognize that the same forces which induced the Italian disaster are operating in France, in England and here at home in the United States we shall have at no distant date to confront another crash, another collapse like that which has taken place in Russia in totality and in Italy in part. Germany has lost the war so far as it is a military question. She cannot defeat the armies of her enemies. She can win only by corrupting the people behind the armies and portions of the armies themselves. Russian and Italian events should serve the greater end; they should be final evidences of the way, and the one way, that the war may be lost. If they do serve this end they may yet prove a beginning of defeat rather than the high water marks of the latest and most dangerous of all German campaigns.—New York Tribune.

What the Navy Has Done

Interesting Figures Concerning Exploits of Navy Given by Prime Minister

In the course of his eulogy of the services in the house of commons recently the Prime Minister stated that since the beginning of the war there have been transported across the seas under the navy's protection:

13,000,000 men; 2,000,000 horses; 25,000,000 tons of explosives and supplies; 50,000,000 tons of coal, oil and other fuel; 113,000,000 tons of food and other materials.

Our naval losses have been only 3,500 men, of whom 2,700 lost their lives through the action of the enemy.

The original expeditionary force numbered 160,000 men. Today the expeditionary force was over 3,000,000, the creation of which was "probably the greatest feat of military organization in the world."

NORTH AMERICAN CONTINENT MUST SUPPLY BULK OF FOOD FOR ALLIES

EVERY EFFORT NECESSARY TO MEET DEFICIENCY

Geographical Position of Canada and the United States in Relation To the Allies, Makes It Imperative That This Continent Provide the Food Necessary for Support of Allied Cause

Until new ships, which are now under construction, become available as cargo carriers, the allies must depend upon the North American continent for wheat and flour. Europe must import not less than 450,000,000 bushels of wheat, or the equivalent in flour, before the next harvest.

The United States today has not one bushel more than would be required for normal consumption in that country, and Canada has only a surplus of 110,000,000 bushels.

There is wheat in Argentina, in Australia, in New Zealand, but without more shipping it cannot be moved. North America must supply almost the entire wheat needs of the allies at least for the next three or four months. The allied nations in Europe had completely exhausted all accessible reserves when the 1917 crop became available. Unfortunately the new harvest of France was less than half the production of a normal year before the war. The Italian crop was also much below the average. Both these countries have required larger amounts of foodstuffs from this continent than was anticipated and their needs will continue.

The geographical position of Canada and the United States in relation to the allies makes it imperative that this continent should provide the food which must be forthcoming during the next few months. Let us then clearly understand the situation. The essentials are:

1. The allies must be fed.
2. They have in their own countries only a fraction of the food required for their own people.
3. Until the shipping shortage is relieved several months hence, the allies must depend upon Canada and the United States to make up their deficiency of essential food supplies, including wheat.
4. Canada and the United States can only spare the needed supplies by reducing their own consumption by at least 20 per cent.
5. If Canada and the United States should fail to make up the allies' deficiency of food, the soldiers would have to go short and the whole allied cause might be endangered.
6. Individual effort, individual saving of individual spoonful of flour, individual economy in the use of bread and flour and individual substitution of other cereals for wheat alone can save the situation and give to the men at the front the support which they must have.

A New Industry

Camphor is being grown in Florida. Since the outbreak of the war, it has been difficult to procure camphor from Formosa, from which place the previous supply had almost entirely come. There are already large plantations being devoted to the growing of this tree, which, it has been proven, grows well in Florida. The largest plantation is reported to be the Statsuma plantation of 2,000 acres in Putnam county.

The number of registrations of automobiles in Saskatchewan has now reached 32,458. This means that there are the same number of cars in the province, or, placing the population at 700,000, one car to every 21 of the population. The fact that most of the car owners are farmers is a sign of the agricultural prosperity of the province.

God and the Casualty List

How War Drove a Doubter to Belief in Immortality

The war put into my soul something that it has never harbored since the day when I took my first step alone—fear. Fear of what might happen to this country has turned me from a mild pacifist into a violent advocate of preparedness. Fear of what might happen to business made me lose more chances in these three years than ever before in my life. And recently there was added another fear, the fear of death.

The fear of God, I remember hearing once in church, is the beginning of wisdom. Perhaps that is true. Perhaps I needed this war to jog me out of my comfortable, unquestioning rut and make me think why I am here, and where I am going, and what it is all about. Perhaps the whole world needed it. Who can say?

It is not my own death that I have feared. I think I can say that without any self-deception. I have feared, fear terribly even now, the possible death of my boy. I visited him at the camp only a few Sundays ago. They let him come over to the hotel where I was staying for a few hours and stay with me.

Virtue is its own reward, I said to myself. If a man lives decently and uprightly, the chances are he will live long and prosper.

I have been allowed to live a good many years, and have been comfortable and happy. But what about my son? His virtue has led him to volunteer his life in the service of a great ideal. Suppose he loses his life? In what way has his virtue been rewarded? If Nero and the Christian martyrs go down to the same oblivion, if the robber of widows and orphans and his victims are sunk by the same submarine, what is the answer?

Argue about it as we will, no man can stand amid the ruins of the San Francisco earthquake or in front of a casualty list in Europe and make himself believe that every human being gets his exact deserts here on this earth. In spite of all argument, justice cries out for some place and time of adjustment; reason insists that life, ending here so senselessly, must be only an episode in a greater and more reasonable whole.

I recently heard a British army officer quoted as saying that he had never seen a single man in the trenches who questioned immortality. Face to face with death, no man can convince himself that death is the end. Even Huxley, who in his strong manhood when his pulses were leaping, could weigh calmly the thought of extinction, found the Great Hope forcing itself into his soul as he drew nearer the end.

If all the truth were known I doubt if any man, since the creation has died without some flicker of that hope. Even Lucretius, standing at his brother's bier, spoke of the "futile of a win." And I, solid, settled man of affairs, I, who had thought that a religion of duty and service was sufficient, I was caught up in the flood of the hope from the moment when my boy announced his decision, and carried on in spite of myself. Immortality a purely speculative moment; but it became all at that moment; but it became all at once to me the real, most pressing, most important subject in the world.

I began reading books on immortality and one after another I tossed them aside as unconvincing. I turned away from them back to the scientific teachers of my earlier days; and here—in the quarter where I had never thought to find it—I came upon my first crumb of comfort. For I discovered that not all the greatest men of science, by any means, had rejected the Great Hope. They were divided, even as other men, half on one side, half on the other. Huxley, to be sure, died in agnosticism, not daring to breathe his soul in faith. But William James, and Kepler, and Sir Oliver Lodge, and William Osler, and scores of others, knowing all that Huxley knew, with the same facilities for judgment and research, these refused to disbelieve. I stretched out my hands to these sturdy champions eagerly.—From the American Magazine.

Fight Against Weariness

One Road Leads to Victory, the Other to Defeat

We must fight against weariness. It is unworthy of us. We must neither write, nor talk, nor think about being weary if we have won the war. We at home have one clear duty, namely, to support by every means in our power, moral and material, our sons, who are bearing themselves so heroically before the enemy. They are not weary and we have no right to be weary either. "We are at the parting of the ways." One road leads to victory, the other to defeat. These are the only two roads open to us, and we have got to choose between them. All talk about a third road through Stockholm, Rome or elsewhere is a device of the enemy to save his own neck. Weariness won't help us to victory. Courage, resolution, endurance will. Did Pitt tire after Austerlitz, or Wellington after Burgos? Nay, but are the French tiring now?—From the London Observer.

WHAT GERMANY WOULD PLAN TO DO IF SHE SHOULD WIN THE WAR

WOULD PUNISH THE WHOLE WORLD IF VICTORIOUS

If Hohenzollerns Attained Victory They Would Use It First to Crush People of Own Country Who Wish a Peaceful World, Then Impose Ruthless Military Rule the World Over

It is well that the allies should understand that when phrases like "Peace with reconciliation" and "Disarmament" are rife in Germany, they mean no more than that for the time being, the fortune of war is not smiling on Germany. So it was a few months ago, when on July 19 the German Reichstag, by a large majority, passed the now famous resolution. So is it not now, thanks to the revolution in Russia and the German peace propaganda in Italy, the Germans have been successful in striking two great military blows. Stresemann, a leader of the national liberals, speaking at Dresden on October 29 "rejoiced that a political situation appeared to have been reached where every obligation of the government to the peace resolution of July 19 had ceased." The Kolnische Zeitung of October 27 devoted a leading article to German colonial troops and came to the conclusion that triumphant Germany should extend her system of universal conscription and military training to the whole of Africa. "The experience of this war," said the article in question, "has shown that East Africa natives, if sufficiently trained and led by Europeans, make efficient soldiers, while the South-west African is an even better soldier given similar circumstances. In future to prevent her colonies from being overrun by other peoples, Germany must utilize to the full these sources of man-power. Such of these natives as have hitherto not been subject to German military discipline, while all foreign colonies which have made war against the German colonies must become German property."

The Fremdenblatt, of October 29 declared that "unless all the indications are false, Italy will share the fate of Roumania, Serbia and Russia. Italy must expiate the guilt of her unscrupulous, faithless and rapacious statesmen." The Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung has been publishing a semi-official review of the operations on the west front written in language that reminds one of the phase of madness in which the patient imagines himself to be emperor of the world. One phrase may be selected from many. "He who is a good German knows that he is as one with the High Command and their great aim, which will, moreover, be attained, victory on all fronts, on land and sea, or, in other words of old Colonel Kottwitz—"In the dust with all the enemies of the Brandenburg."

Even the Austrian papers have been infected, and it may be suspected that one of the chief reasons for the huge onslaught on Italy, was not so much to attack Italy as to encourage Austria. "Today," wrote the Austrian Fremdenblatt, on October 31, "after more than three years of terrible war, Roumania and Serbia are annihilated, Russia is shattered and Italy is pierced to the heart. The tremendous importance of our alliance with Germany will now be obvious to the dumbest mind, and everyone must now recognize that the main pillar of our policy must be the alliance with Germany." The Vienna Extrablatt of the same date maintained that the central powers will determine by the sword the course of events. "It is their alliance which has reaped the victory, and it is they who will dictate the new order of things for the welfare even of those who now resist them."

Count von Reventlow, as was to be expected spreads himself and Germany still more widely as a result of the Italian successes.

Writing in the Deutsche Tageszeitung of October 31, he said: "We confine ourselves today to a general statement of our aims—that, for the future, an active Adriatic policy on the part of Italy shall be made completely impossible, and this not by paper guarantees"—(no one knows better than the Germans the value of paper guarantees) "but by real guarantees; that is to say by appropriate territorial changes on the coast of the Adriatic." Germany and Austria-Hungary are to work together as regards the development of their power "in the Mediterranean and the world." "The Mediterranean was the weak side of the old triple alliance. The new quadruple alliance can, after the overthrow of Italy, give quite a different appearance to the Mediterranean problem. This can be done by creating and securing two central points of power—the Adriatic and Constantinople, with the Straits. Such a political, maritime and economic position would stand in the closest combination with the position of the German empire in the north, and, if this position remains dominant in the Baltic and on the coast of Flanders, Great Britain's sea tyranny will be set a difficult and probably an insoluble problem."

The Frankfurter Zeitung, usually a rather moderate journal, has also joined the chorus. On November 31 it wrote: "The entente will never be able to subdue fate, and the result of its present attitude and endeavor will be what it need not have been at the outset, namely, defeat." "If the entente had only been willing to conclude belatedly a peace based on understanding it would have been saved the complete overthrow of Roumania, the submarine warfare, the Russian revolution and now the victory in Italy which has made the central European alliance so strong and close."

We need not multiply quotations. They would only confirm the impression that if Germany were to obtain victory, she would use it first to crush down those of her own people who wish for a peaceful world, and next to impose a ruthless military domination on every part of the world. But if she cannot get victory, she is all for peace—peace with reconciliation. Her alternative policies are to punish the whole world if she is successful, to avoid punishment if she is beaten. She is like her own soldiers, who failing to kill, throw up their hands and cry "Kamerad."

Tricks of a German Spy

An Old Russian Merchant Who Dealt in Damaged Laces

The successful spy is generally the least obvious person in the community he endangers, says A. Curtis Roth in The Saturday Evening Post. He may be a commercial traveler, a small tradesman, a waiter, a mechanic or a wandering bon vivant.

One of the most successful German spies operating from Saxony was an old Russian merchant who dealt in damaged laces and broken boots. He bought laces and embroidered ruffs from the manufacturers in Plauen and in St. Gall, Switzerland, and before the war had built up an excellent business in England. His business address was in Rotterdam, where his laces were warehoused pending shipment to English customers. When the war broke out the German foreign office detailed one of its agents to take over the supervision of the Russian's office in Rotterdam and employed the old merchant on English business. He made regular trips to England, and I understand gathered some very valuable information there.

As this agent was typical of hundreds of other agents, it is worth while to describe his methods. He visited England on a Dutch passport, equipped with nothing more formidable than lace and embroidery samples and two cases of cigarettes. The cigarettes in one case contained, impregnated in their paper covering, the chemical out of which the Germans manufacture their new invisible ink. All more bulky messages were forwarded in this invisible ink. They were contained in commonplace business messages to the firm offices in Holland. The visible messages, detailing English orders, were written upon any sort of letter paper, and then the secret information was written across the apparent message. The merchant would soak a cigarette covering in a cup of water, the resulting fluid being the invisible ink, and would write the invisible message very lightly with a toothpick. These messages were developed by chemical treatment in Holland, and their purport sent by courier to the Dutch border, whence they were telegraphed to Berlin.

A great deal of important information concerning the enemy is relayed in this way through commercial houses in Switzerland, Holland, Denmark and Sweden.

German Dreams of Peace

German Workers Openly Aver that They Will Not Go Through Another Winter of War

The Tribuna publishes an interesting account of conditions in Germany, furnished by Signor Francesco Bellomo, an Italian who recently succeeded in making his escape from Germany. "The German people," he said, "dream of nothing but an immediate peace—it is an obsession with them—and they have fixed January next as the month in which peace will come. German workers openly aver that they will not go through another winter of war; rather than endure that they will refuse to work in the military establishments. Large numbers of soldiers participated in a recent anti-war demonstration in Berlin, and hundreds of persons, including many soldiers, were killed and injured in the rioting. Demonstrations against the war are growing more numerous and more serious throughout the country, and the growing frequency of air-raids on German towns is having a marked effect on the morale of the people."

Local curlers took in the bonspiel at Olds last week. A. G. Studer, A. Brusso, J. V. Berscht, Jim Reed and Geo. Alden represented Didsbury, and while they failed to bring home any trophies they made their opponents sit up and take notice as the following item from the Olds Gazette testifies: "Studer, whose rink had not played this year, put up some good games. He was one of the best skips on the ice."

The following shipment of articles made by the local Red Cross was shipped to the Calgary depot by the Vice-President, Mrs. H. E. Osmond, on January 18th: Scarf, 12 kit bags, 36 pyjamas, 3 pairs hospital trousers, 32 binders, 21 many tailed bandages, 24 towels, 12 T bandages, 36 hospital handkerchiefs, 48 pillow cases, 18 operation stockings, 90 triangular bandages, 9 nurses' aprons, 5 day shirts, 2 pneumonia jackets, 10 triangular slings, Balclava cap, 24 pairs of stockings.

Two young men who are prisoners of war have sent cards to the W. C. T. U. acknowledging the parcels received, Pte. L. S. Blampied, No. 13639 and Pte. F. G. Trickett, No. 21527. They write: "Received parcels in good condition and regular, with very best thanks." We trust the Didsbury friends will continue to support the needy cause.

Capt. (Dr.) A. J. Weart, of Calgary, was a visitor on business in town on Saturday. He came over from England on duty with a number of invalided men in the fall and expects to be returned again shortly. His little daughter, Margaret, is slowly recovering after her recent severe illness. A great many of his friends in the district who saw him while in town were pleased to renew old friendships. He states that since he came back to Canada he realizes how little the Canadians are suffering in material comforts compared to those over on the other side of water, and is full of praise for the Canadian boys over on the other side. He states that he saw Capt. (Dr.) Reid while over there, as well as a lot of the other local boys, and says that Capt. Reid is the same good old scout as ever and that he is getting fat and looking fine.

Rosebud Items

The weather of late has been rather cool, but the farmers are busy getting their hay baled and hauled to town.

The basket supper held at the Rosebud school some time ago was a huge success as they realized $133.75 for the Red Cross. Mrs. J. C. Stevens donated a silk crazy quilt to be sold, which brought $35, and the baskets and lunches brought the rest. Alice Stevens deserves much credit for training the children.

Mr. Fox received word last Friday that his brother passed away in Calgary.

Lars Nelson and family are joy riding these days in a Ford car. Lars says there is nothing like keeping up with the times.

Mr. Eubank returned from Ontario better satisfied with Alberta than ever.

On motion H. E. Pearson was elected Reeve for the year 1918.

The Olds hospital will be paid the sum of $300 during 1918, said sum to be paid monthly at the rate of $25 per month, and if a Municipal hospital is established during that time the balance remaining unpaid shall stop.

Lawyers representing Mr. L. B. Bardeau wrote asking for damages because his outfit was upset about 15 miles east of Didsbury, claiming the road was in a defective state.

The Secretary was instructed to write the Solicitors that the Council does not consider themselves liable for the accident, and also that insufficient notice was given as required by law.

The Council decided to send Councillors Rupp and Metz as delegates to the next Convention of Rural Municipalities to be held in February and that their expenses be paid. It was also decided that if any other member of the Council wished to attend that their expenses should also be paid.

Mr. J. M. Reed, of Didsbury, was appointed auditor for 1918 at a salary of $50 per audit.
